One of the most powerful ways to connect your vision with action is by tracking your progress with a single, simple number I call your Freedom Score. You'll learn it properly in the PLAN section. For now, just remember what you wrote earlier: your living cost, your passive income, and the gap. That gap is what your Freedom Score is designed to shrink, step by step, without adding stress

Take 10–15 minutes to reflect and write down your answers to the questions below. Don't overthink it, just let your thoughts flow. This is your moment to define what freedom looks like for you.

1. If money weren't an issue, how would you spend your time? (Think about your ideal day, week, or life rhythm.)

2. What are the top three things you want more of in life? (E.g., Time? Travel? Security? Purpose? Family? Relationships?)

3. What are you no longer willing to tolerate financially? (E.g., Debt? Dependence? Stress? Living pay-to-pay?)

4. When you imagine financial freedom, what emotions come up? (E.g., Joy? Confidence? Peace? Excitement?)

5. What's one bold 'freedom' goal you want to achieve in the next 12 months? (It could be increasing income, reducing debt, building savings, investing, or lowering your cost of living. Make it SMART: Specific, Measurable, Achievable, Relevant, and Time-bound.)
